The Challenge

- Chalk, Slate n Rise - Nurturing Dreams and Building Futures: Through this program they cover educational expenses for young learners and also enhance their educational environment with necessary infrastructure. The latest feather in their cap is the 'Aspire to Inspire' scholarship program where they grant scholarships worth 6 lakhs INR to 30 deserving students facing financial challenges in Bengal. Individual donors(Edu parents) bear the educational cost for these children and need to be notified about their progress. Managing these reports, newsletters, and updates is difficult without standardized templates, and requires laborious manual processes.
- Free Clothes Bank: Pioneering Compassion in Kolkata: Their initiative welcomes used clothes in good condition, ensuring they reach those in need at just the right moment. Each donation undergoes meticulous sorting, cleaning, and packaging before being gifted. They struggle with donor communication due to high call volumes regarding information about donation processes which include the do's and don'ts, collection centre addresses, current requirements and available timeslots for clothes donation.

How can technology help streamline the donations and donor management across the different programs with a focus on automation of processes and facilitating communication and engagement with donors?
